While he was held in Bilibid Prison, Manila, Philippine Islands with other veterans of Corregidor and Bataan, Lt. Homer Hutchinson, Pasadena, Calif., built a radio set with parts he secretly took from the Japanese. The set was concealed in the seat of a stool. The men received hope by listening to shortwave broadcasts from the United States, and plotting the course of the war on maps, possession of which meant certain death. Lt. Hutchinson listens to the radio, as an unidentified man, and Chief Pharmacist's Mate Robert W. Kentner, Buffalo, N. Y., looks on. Bilibid was taken, without a struggle, by U. S. tank destroyer units, as the Japanese turned the keys over to the American camp commander and fled after our men entered the Santo Tomas Prison Camp. February 1945.

This picture, captured from the Japanese, shows American prisoners, using improvised litters to carry those of their comrades who, from lack of food or water on the march from Bataan, fell along the road.

"GHASTLY AND PITIFUL" WERE SIGHTS AT THE DAVAO PENAL COLONY---
Part of the Davao Penal Colony of the Japs, located in late May outside the city of Davao behind Jap lines by men of the USAFPE Recovered Personnel Field Team and gm 130th Infantry guerrillas, was this cemetery marked "Dapecol - American National Cemetery - 1942." When the recovery group arrived at this point they began finding mummified bodies, skeletons and piles of human bones throughout the area. Most appeared to be Filipino prisoners, but a few may have been Americans or other white men. From visible evidence it appeared that these individuals were prisoners too ill to travel at the time the Japs evacuated the colony as a prison and were consequently abandoned to die. There were at least 75 bodies about the grasses. A total of 20 markers were in this cemetery, 19 of which bear inscriptions. (NO CREDIT INDICATED) 16-6-45

Dear Colonel Hardee:

It is indeed a pleasure to be able to reply favorably to your letter of 21 September 1949 regarding a Bronze Star Medal and Combat Infantryman Badge.

A review of your service on Batasan in 1942 indicates that you richly earned the right to wear the above decoration and badge.

Department of the Army Letter Orders awarding you the Bronze Star Medal and the Combat Infantryman Badge, as well as the Certificate for the Bronze Star Medal, are inclosed.

I am certain that this further recognition of your self-sacrificing service to our Country will prove a continuing source of satisfaction to you.

Faithfully yours,

DISTINGUISHED-SERVICE CROSS

By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 9 July 1918 (Bulletin 43, WD, 1918), the Distinguished-Service Cross is awarded by the Commanding General, United States Army Forces in the Far East, to the following-named officer:

Colonel DAVID L. HARDEE, (O-11903), (then Lieutenant Colonel), Infantry, United States Army. For extraordinary heroism in action at Orion and Linay, Bataan, Philippine Islands, on 7-8 April 1942. Colonel Hardee was serving in the capacity of executive officer of a provisional Air Corps regiment, operating as Infantry. Although suffering from disease and so weak he could scarcely walk, he had remained on front-line duty for 73 days, refusing evacuation. On 7 April 1942, Colonel Hardee's regiment was attacked on its front, left flank, and left rear by a superior enemy ground force supported by heavy artillery fire and by numerous enemy bombers. During the two days conflict which followed, Colonel Hardee, continually under enemy fire, visited and rallied the troops, directing them to new positions, personally leading convoys and supervising the maintenance of communications. The resolute, calm and determined leadership of this officer while under hostile fire was in a large measure responsible for the regiment's fighting six delaying actions in two days, throughout which it preserved its combat integrity and was still fighting astride the main approach to our rear area when the final action of the Bataan operation terminated. The courage, heroism, and personal example displayed by Colonel Hardee upheld the highest tradition of the military service.

According to Colonel Melvin H Rosen (U.S. Army Ret.), this photo, (208-AA-288-BB-2) is not a photograph taken during the Bataan Death March, but rather a photograph of a burial detail at Camp O'Donnell, the terminus of the "Death March". Mr. Rosen is one of the survivors of the "Death March", and remembers clearly that burial details were common at the camp. As a further indication that this is a burial detail, he pointed out that if you look closely at the faces of the first two individuals carrying the improvised litters, you can clearly see that each one has a white "mask" over his nose and mouth.

MANILA'S WATERFRONT FACILITIES SMASHED BY JAPANESE

The famous Pier 7, largest in Manila, was seriously damaged when the Japanese futilely attempted to hold the Philippine capital.

A large cargo ship and several small vessels lie smashed beside the pier. The enemy ruthlessly devastated large areas of the city when U. S. and Filipino forces entered it on Feb. 4, 1945, after driving 130 miles (208 km.) south from Lingayon Gulf. Despite this, the city was liberated on Feb. 23, and U.S. troops immediately started rebuilding its communication, transportation and water supply systems. While restoring the main water supply facilities, U.S. engineers established 31 water points within the capital to meet the needs of the people. U.S. forces also started working on the rehabilitation of the port of Manila.
