B does not know the attached status of medical officer KOBAYASHI.

(TH: The following appears in upper margin:)
About this time, A resigned himself to a severe sentence and requested B to find a successor for his clinic.

h. On the afternoon of 17 August 47, A visited B unexpectedly saying that when he was investigated in late June, he thought nothing much would come of the case, but that lately things had started to turn very bad, and he was being summoned for investigation every day. He had to report for investigation early the following day, and having a favor to ask, he stayed overnight, saying he would leave the next morning. That night, he had the following to say: The case had gone far beyond the mere fact of affixing his seal to false medical certificates. Evidence from various sources had uncovered the fact that there were unnatural deaths among the patients handled by A - in A's belief, those handled by medical officers MORISUE and KOBAYASHI while A was on an official trip to KOFU - at least, A's name was on the medical certificates, and A was suspected of having given the men poisonous drugs, taken either orally or by injection. A had explained to the best of his ability, but apparently to little avail. A was beginning to see that if things went on as they were, A would certainly wind up at SUGAMO sooner or later with a severe sentence. A said that he had come to talk it over with B since it was obvious that he would have to give up his practice. He asked B to look after his family, for otherwise they would starve. B did not at that time realize that A had thoughts of suicide in mind. A went on to say that if he went to SUGAMO he could ask some woman physician, or a former colleague at DAIREN called KAWASAKI (Then working in YAMAGUCHI Ken), to take over in his absence.

i. B received a postcard from A around October stating "The investigation conducted in August continued for several days and made me very pessimistic, but I have not heard anything since then and, believing myself cleared of suspicion, I am working hard at my medical practice. Please come to visit me some day".

j. However, about 1400 hours on 10 December 47, A arrived at the home of B, looking harassed, and unburdened himself as follows: "My case has reached the worst possible point. The attitude of the investigation has changed completely from that of around November and I am now treated as though I were a criminal. I have been threatened and on one occasion a confession was demanded of me after questions about the circumstances of my family were asked. I am spending uneasy days with such questioning going on day after day and wondering every day when I will be sent to SUGAMO. If I am to be imprisoned, a considerable number of days will be required before the decision is delivered. Naturally I will have to give up my medical practice and in my absence my large family will have no means of support. It will be miserable with myself in prison worrying about my family and my family worrying about me. After much reflection, I have concluded that the only way to save my family is for me to commit suicide." Shocked I tried my best to dissuade him from hasty steps and encouraged him by telling him that if he thought he had nothing to be ashamed of as a doctor in his army job, he should go to SUGAMO as a prisoner and that if he stuck to his beliefs and explained everything the cloud of suspicion would in time be lifted, but A showed no sign of heeding my words. He said that he was to present himself again the following day, but since that would mean he would be taken to SUGAMO, he would call it off and spend half a day pleasantly with his family and leave the rest in the hands of God. He seemed quite determined at that point. As it had become late, B saw A to the station and as they walked, A talked of how Mr HASHIDA, Education Minister during the war, received a notice of arrest and immediately took poison. A asked B what drug was used in that case and B answered that it was probably potassium cyanide (Kalium Oxycyanatum) (TN: Sic), whereupon A said he did not have any, but that he had arsenic acid in his possession and could kill himself at any time. B separated from A about 1700 hours when it was starting to get dark. That night, B could not sleep for worrying about A. The next day, on 11 December, a phone call was received from MATSUYAMA a little past 1600 hours, saying that Toshitsura had suddenly died around 1300 hours. I immediately left for A's house and, about 2100 hours, was shown A's corpse laid out upstairs in his home.

(TN Marginal note:) A calls on B the day before A's suicide. Speaks about suicide and entrusts his affairs to B.

December 29, 1945

To whom it may concern,

I am an ex-M.P. of the Japanese army. I was drafted May 1, 1945, and because of my knowledge of English, was sent to the headquarters of the Military Police in Tokyo, at Takehira-cho. (The building is now used by the Allied forces and renamed Norton Hall, I think.) My work at the headquarters consisted in acting as interpreter at the interrogation and investigation of American pilots, shot down with their B-29's, P-51's, etc.

During the time that I was at the headquarters, that is from May to September, I saw much that would make your blood boil. There were some hundred such pilots, crowded into those narrow and unwholesome cells---dungeons, I should rather call them. I need not enter into a detailed account of the gruesome treatment that the prisoners received. You can hear it from their own mouths for they are now returned to their respective homes in America.

There was an officer, a lieutenant of the second class, by the name of Fox who died after three days of being shot down and imprisoned here, from rough handling and sheer neglect. Captain Valentine Gaudinai, a B-29 pilot and graduate of West Point, was horribly beaten with bamboo rods tied together, besides being kicked mercilessly on his bare back as he was flung, blindfolded on the floor. Captain Joseph Schroff of the carrier, Shang-li-ra, (I am not quite sure about the spelling,) Captain Gordon Jordan, a B-29 pilot, sergeant Morris, a B-29 gunner or something, were all very brutally treated, especially the last-named who had an awful gash in his ankle as a result of an accident in landing. He was nevertheless so violently kicked in the chest with a heavy leather boot that we had to throw cold water upon his face. Of course nothing was ever done about the wound in his ankle---and it putrified so that the whole cell stank. Needless to say, all the prisoners were placed on a starvation diet.

I am following with interest the court-proceedings in regard to Tatsuo Tauchiya, who was sentenced to life-imprisonment and penal labor. I don't know whether he deserves the sentence or whether the court was too lenient with him. Anyhow this I know that among the M.P.'s with whom I worked for three months, there are officers and men who deserve to be judged such more rigorously than Tauchiya.

In the M.P. headquarters, there was a section called the Foreign Affairs section (goh-gai-ka), and the officer in charge of the section was Captain Teisio Toyama (then First Lieutenant), a most satanic sadist. He systematically and forcibly educated the men under him, myself included, in methods of cruelty. By his command and under his personal supervision, prisoners were kicked, cuffed and beaten with clubs. I am daily looking in the papers for his name to appear among those arrested for cruelty towards prisoners, but so far his name has not appeared. As far as I knew, he is now in Niigata Prefecture, because towards the end of the war, he had most of his belongings transported there.

I was at the M.P. headquarters only a few months, and besides I was a private of the lowest class. (It was only a few weeks before my demobilization that I was made private of the first class and a regular M.P., all for form's sake.) I do not know much about the doings of the Japanese M.P. through the war, but by arresting Captain Toyama and questioning him, you will be able to find out all for he was head of the section that dealt with all matters concerning prisoners. Another man who was directly connected with the treatment (or rather the ill-treatment, I should say) of the prisoners was Second Lieutenant Tachi. The highest commanding officer at the M.P. headquarters was Colonel Ranjo Fujino. I am giving these names because so far these men seem not to have been arrested whereas they are guilty of far more atrocious cruelties than the condemned Tauchiya ever was. It would be unfair and unjust were Tauchiya to be condemned to life-imprisonment while these others went at large.

Of course my name and the address I have used are fictitious. I think that the data I have given you are sufficient to start you on the right track in the cause of justice and fairness. But if it is necessary or convenient that I should give further information, please put in an English advertisement for me in the Asahi, and I will report myself at your headquarters, even did it involve a danger to my life.

May your work of justice prosper, and may Japan be purged of all such as have made it a hell on earth, not only for the American prisoners of war, but likewise for the Japanese nationals at large, who were the innocent victims of militarism.
